

Mills and Wadsworth Speaking Here Today

Both Candidates at Republican Mass Meeting at Auditorium Theatre This Afternoon—Wadsworth Deplores Attempts to Belittle President Coolidge—Campaign Clatter Cannot Change Facts, He Says.

The Auditorium Theatre on Pine Grove avenue was filled to capacity this afternoon when Ogden L. Mills, Republican candidate for governor, and James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Republican candidate for re-election to the United States Senate, addressed a Republican mass meeting at the theatre.

Owing to the fact that both men speak at the New York city rally this evening the meeting was called to order promptly at 1:30 o'clock in order to allow them to fully discuss the campaign issues and return to New York city in time to appear at this evening's meeting.

Mr. Mills and Senator Wadsworth were met at Rhinecliff at 12:09 o'clock by the tug Rob and conveyed across the Hudson river to this city where they were met by Philip Elting, chairman of the Republican county committee; Supreme Court Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck, County Judge Joseph M. Fowler, former Mayor Palmer A. Canfield, County Attorney John W. Eckert and other prominent Republicans.

Dined at Stuyvesant Hotel. Congressman Mills and Senator Wadsworth and their party were entertained at dinner at the Hotel Stuyvesant, and after eating went to the theatre where every seat was filled shortly after 1 o'clock. By 1:30 o'clock many were forced to stand and by the time the rally opened the theatre was filled to its capacity.

Wadsworth Praised Coolidge. Attempts to belittle President Coolidge during the present political campaign were scored by Senator Wadsworth in his speech.

"To belittle President Coolidge," said the senator, "is too much like trying to say that the American dollar does not buy a hundred cents worth of value. It is barely possible that there are those who would not endorse President Coolidge because of their conviction that no Republican could possibly have any merit. But I do not believe there exists a normal human being who will deny that President Coolidge stands as one of the big figures in America's material history.

"The prosperity in America made possible by President Coolidge means opportunity for culture, leisure and entertainment, and opportunity to do congenial work in a working day that begins after daylight and ends before twilight. No kind of campaign clatter can change that fact."

The party is scheduled to take the 4:20 ferry to Rhinecliff and embark there for New York city.

Andrews Predicts Liquor Scarcity

For Holiday Trade, Due To Effects of Coast Guard and Britain Agreement—Says Rum Runners Are Actually on the Run.

Washington, Oct. 30 (AP).—Prospects of a real scarcity of rum for liquor for the holiday trade are in sight, Assistant Secretary Andrews, chief of the dry forces, believes.

The rum runners are actually on the run, General Andrews understands, thanks to the coast guard and the agreement he reached with Great Britain last summer.

Reports from Halifax indicate the rum fleet has quit that base since the new agreement, providing for more direct exchange of information between the governments.

General Andrews received a report today from Halifax stating that for the week ending October 16, "Halifax harbor had no rum ships for the first time in history."

The coast guard reports only four ships, all under close watch, are now in the North Atlantic zone.

Beware of Malware's FRANK PLAYING TONIGHT.

Sunday night is Halloween, but it will be generally celebrated tonight. It will be tonight instead of Sunday night when the small boy, and the big boy as well, will enjoy himself with the pranks which usually accompany this date.

Those who have tempting fates and other movable objects should do well to properly secure them for the night and avoid a prolonged hunt later.

Under Crossing Meeting Here. A hearing will be held in Kingston on Friday, November 5, at 1 p. m., before Edward J. Gorman, assistant engineer of the Public Service Commission, in the matter of the extension of the highway grade crossing of County Highway No. 239 near Arville station, and the Union and Delaware railroad in the town of Middleburgh, Delaware county.

Bank Teller Skips With $436,976

Fugitive Writes Letter To Bank Officials Accurately Describing His Shortages—Search Being Made In Eastern States.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 30 (AP).—Courtney Glisson, 30 year old teller of the Bank of Commerce and Trust Company of Memphis, who dreamed of financing a business with branches in a number of cities on $436,976 he misappropriated from the bank's funds was being sought in the eastern states today.

Glisson, an active church member who was known as a "model husband" and who did not drink and whose only "bad habit" was smoking, disappeared yesterday after he had for three years juggled his accounts in the bank. A letter was received by the bank officials, postmarked Nashville, in which the fugitive described his shortages so accurately that bank examiners were enabled to finish their work speedily.

In the letter Glisson detailed how he had kept his shortage concealed. He had kept an accurate record of his speculation and had expected, he said, that he would some day be detected and he had made his preparations for immediate flight.

How well he had laid his plans was demonstrated by the fact that when he walked into the bank Wednesday and found examiners looking over his records he disappeared.

Troopers Arrest Jones at Catskill

Cleveland Jones, wanted at Ulster Landing, town of Ulster, for the shooting of Millard Wentworth and his wife, was apprehended at Catskill late Friday by State Troopers from "G" Troop. Jones was taken in custody and held at Catskill until today when he was brought back to answer the charge. He will be arraigned later.

Friday several suspects were picked up and examined but after a close check-up they were allowed to go. Deputy Sheriff Seth Jocelyn picked up a man on Wall street who tallied with the description of the wanted man and whose clothing also tallied with the description sent out. After an examination, however, he was able to convince the authorities that he was not the man wanted.

Wentworth was shot following an argument and taken to the Benedictine Hospital where Dr. Gannon on Friday night operated, picking out many of the shot which had lodged in his body. Mrs. Wentworth was struck by a few scattered birdshot and after being attended at the hospital was able to return home.

Mrs. John Schibelski Found Guilty of Disorderly Conduct in Ripping Officer Roodell's Uniform—Will Pay $20 to Repair Uniform.

Mrs. John Schibelski found it rather expensive to tear the uniform of a policeman when she was notified by Judge Shufeldt in police court today that to repair the uniform would cost her $20. She was also sentenced to ten days in jail, which was suspended during good behavior.

Mrs. Schibelski was arrested several nights ago on a charge of disorderly conduct in disturbing the neighborhood. Officer Roodell, who placed her under arrest, found he had a fight on his hands and in the melee she ripped off the buttons of his coat and tore the cloth.

Coolidge Silent In Illinois Fight

White House Denies President Has Expressed Any Attitude on the Choice For U. S. Senator in Illinois—Smith's Defense.

Washington, Oct. 30 (AP).—The great American drama, "politics of 1926" hurried today toward its climax with actors throughout the country concentrating their last minute efforts upon snaring the elusive voter in the last act. Tuesday's election which will decide completion of the 70th congress.

Sharing interest with appeals by spokesmen for the two major parties was a formal White House statement denying that President Coolidge had expressed any attitude on the choice of a United States senator in Illinois, and a defense by Frank L. Smith, Republican senatorial nominee in that state, against attacks on contributions to his campaign fund by Samuel Insull, utility magnate, while Smith as chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission exercised supervision over rates and service of the Insull companies.

"What if Samuel Insull did contribute to the campaign fund used in my behalf?" declared Smith. "Other interests contribute to the campaign funds of candidates for president—the railroads, banking interests, the steel industry, sugar industry. Will any one dare say that these contributions disqualify the candidate for president to hold the office if elected?"

The formal White House statement was issued without comment after the President had been informed that yesterday's issue of the Chicago Tribune had represented him as making certain comments on the Illinois political situation.

The President, it said, "has given no interviews, made no statement, taken no position and expressed no attitude for the purpose of influencing the choice of a United States senator in Illinois."

Atheists Oppose Proclamation

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—A telegram asking him to refrain from issuing a Thanksgiving proclamation on the ground that it is contrary to the secular principles of the constitution has been sent President Coolidge by the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism.

The telegram said in part: "The atheists of America call upon you to return to the precedent established by Thomas Jefferson, who refused to issue a single proclamation. When asked his reasons, Jefferson said, 'I consider the president as interdicted by the Constitution from meddling with religious institutions, their doctrines, discipline or exercise.'"

"If our petition is rejected and you prefer to exceed the authority of your office, special reference should be made to the thanks due from the stricken state of Florida."

Blizzard Adds to Armenia Misery

Leninakan, Armenia, Oct. 30 (AP).—A blizzard today swept the region devastated by last week's earthquake, adding to the misery of the homeless survivors. Earth shocks continued intermittently.

The situation of the shelterless populace is desperate and the morale of many seems to have gone. The problem of caring for obstetrical cases is most acute. At the appeal of Armenian government, three Near East Relief nurses have been assigned to care for the newly born babies, 72 of whom the earthquake ushered into the world.

Leninakan is assuming the appearance of a city on the war front. Dug-out caves, trenches and all sorts of underground shelters are appearing everywhere as the homeless people make frantic efforts to protect themselves from the snow and the cold.

Built Wall Around Woman's Body

Monticello Murder Trial Reveals That Wall of Flat Stones Had Been Built Around Victim's Body.

Monticello, N. Y., Oct. 30 (AP).—The state continued to rear a wall of circumstantial evidence between Charles Wise and his freedom today—a wall which the defense occasionally shakes, but has not tried to demolish. The demolition will come next week, the defense of the young ward of charity, accused of murdering fifty-year-old Nina Vilona, indicated.

Sheriff Fletcher E. Rhodes, who has gathered most of the evidence against the boy, and is one of the star witnesses for the prosecution occupied the stand all of this morning.

Shoes in Evidence.

The shoes that Wise wore the day of the murder were submitted in evidence today. They were badly dilapidated, tan in color and the bottom portions of both heels had been torn off.

It was these shoes, the prosecution contends, that made the footprints about the body of Miss Vilona, where it was buried beneath a pile of stones. The formation of the pile of stones came to light for the first time in Sheriff Rhodes's testimony today, and in this particular formation the defending attorneys have a point in their favor.

Wall Around Dead Body.

Sheriff Rhodes stated that entirely around the body was a wall of flat stones placed upon edge. Across the woman's neck had been laid a slab about two feet long, ten inches wide, and of considerable thickness in the middle. It was not a haphazard mound, but one of design and must have required between half and an hour to build, stated the sheriff.

Unable to Identify Youth.

The first great crisis of the trial occurred yesterday afternoon when George A. Wobbe, Brooklyn jeweler, who had been fishing in the Never-sink river on the day of the murder, admitted that he could not identify as Charles Wise the youth of strange actions he had seen near Black Hole.

The admission allowed the defense to fix again the attention of the jurors on another unknown fisherman, a person seen near the place where the body was found.

Dr. Webb was the builder and a former president of the Mohawk and Malone Railroad and a director of the Pullman Company, the Central Vermont Railroad and other transportation companies.

Fisher Retires After 49 Years

Engineer Who Ran First West Shore Railroad Train from Weehawken to Kingston Makes Last Run—Was 70 Years Old Sunday—Formerly Lived in Kingston.

Engineer George E. Fisher, 70 years old, of No. 4 First street, Weehawken, N. J., retired today after forty-nine years' service with the West Shore Railroad. Mr. Fisher ran the first passenger train over the road between Kingston and New York on June 25, 1883, and the first train between Albany and New York on July 6, 1883. He celebrated his seventieth birthday on Sunday.

Of the two hundred engineers in the employ of the West Shore after the Albany section was completed and opened to traffic, Mr. Fisher and one other were the only ones left in the service Friday. Two others are living but have been retired on pensions.

When Mr. Fisher first entered the employ of the West Shore railroad he resided in Kingston where he married the daughter of the late John S. Bray, and later made his home in Weehawken. He is the father of four sons who are living.

There are many in Kingston today who remember when the West Shore railroad tracks first reached Kingston, and Mr. Fisher still has the flag that was presented to him by the city's residents when the first trip was made from New York to Kingston. They also recall that when the road first reached this city there was a man living in a nearby village who desired to have his furniture moved near his home. At that time the railroad had not been incorporated to carry freight and the man was told if he paid a one dollar gold piece the furniture would be moved. He did so and it was Engineer Fisher who had charge of the engine that hauled the first freight over the road. The gold piece is still preserved in the general offices of the railroad.

Engineer Fisher makes his last trip over the West Shore railroad as an engineer today when he left New York for Albany at 8:20 o'clock, and will return tonight at 8:45 o'clock.

Solicited Money To Buy a "Wipe"

Abraham Gardner Sentenced to Penitentiary for Stopping Folks on Streets and Asking for 15 Cents to Purchase a Handkerchief.

"Will you kindly give me fifteen cents, I want to buy a 'wipe'," said Abraham Gardner as he met pedestrians on the Strand Friday evening.

"What do you mean, 'wipe'?" queried one of those accosted.

"A handkerchief," explained Abraham earnestly.

His campaign to buy "wipes", however, was brought to a sudden termination by Officers Dowser and Welch who placed him under arrest on a charge of panhandling.

It developed later that Abraham on Friday had just completed a ten days term in the county jail on a panhandling charge, and this morning Judge Shufeldt sentenced him to ninety days in the Albany penitentiary.

Abraham shook his head sadly when he learned his sentence and muttered to himself: "Gosh, after this when I need a 'wipe' I'll do without it."

The serving of the penitentiary sentence, however, was suspended provided she paid the fine and left town today. Lucas had a nasty slash in the abdomen which was sewed up at the Kingston City Hospital, and after remaining in the hospital for several days he was able to return to his home.

Election Drives Will End Today

One of the Hottest Campaigns For Appeals For Votes in New York Comes to a Close Today in Two Mass Meetings.

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—One of the hottest campaigns New York has ever known ends today.

The official close of the appeals for votes at next Tuesday's election comes in two mass meetings at which the chief Republican and Democratic candidates will speak.

The alleged sale of impure milk in New York was placed beside prohibition as an outstanding issue.

Governor Alfred E. Smith, seeking a fourth term as Democratic chief executive of the state, has persistently sought to force his Republican opponent, Ogden L. Mills to campaign on what he declares to be important state issues, but Mr. Mills has emphasized the milk issue throughout his tour of the state.

Charges that Governor Smith desired a fourth term merely as a "stepping stone to the presidency" have been discounted by the executive as "ridiculous."

Prohibition in Senatorial Contest.

Prohibition, expected to be one of the chief issues, has been confined to the senatorial contest, in which James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Republican, is seeking re-election against Robert F. Wagner of New York city. Senator Wadsworth, arguing in favor of modification of the federal prohibition statutes so as to allow each state to fix its own definition of intoxicating liquor, has been accused by Judge Wagner of "straddling" the question, recalling that Wadsworth voted twice in favor of the Volstead Act.

Ending Drive in New York City.

All of the candidates have spent the past week campaigning in the metropolitan district, after touring the upstate sections for the previous three weeks. Senator Wadsworth, using a large motor bus as his means of transportation, passed first through a strongly dry Republican area where he was assured by leaders that he would be supported because a vote for him meant support of the Coolidge administration.

Mr. Mills, touring dairy sections of the state, left behind him what the Democratic leaders have declared to be divided support, because of his attacks on the type of milk sold in this city.

Smith Followers Predict Election.

Everywhere that Governor Smith went with Judge Wagner, he was claimed wildly by large crowds, who many in his audiences again demonstrating his popularity by familiarly calling him "Al." Taking as his "text" quotations from campaign speeches of his Republican opponent, the governor drew continuous laughter and applause from his listeners, and brought about prediction by his managers that his plurality would exceed that of more than 100,000 over Theodore Roosevelt, two years ago, and nearly reach, if not exceed the 285,000 figure of his victory over Nathan L. Miller four years ago.

Buzz Saw Caused Woman's Death

Mrs. Harry Shaver of Flatbush Road Was Standing About Fifteen Feet Away When Saw Broke Loose and Knocked Her Down, Practically Severing Leg.

Mrs. Harry Shaver of the Flatbush road died at the Kingston City Hospital shortly after midnight this morning of injuries received when she was horribly mangled by a buzz saw at her home on Wednesday.

Her husband was near the barn sawing wood when his wife came out to see him. He had always warned her to stand clear of the saw and she was standing about ten or fifteen feet away when her husband stopped the engine and threw off the belt.

As he did so, the saw seemed to leap forward at a terrific rate of speed and struck the woman, hurling her to the ground, mangle her leg from the hip down. It sawed through the hip bone, the knee cap, and practically severed the leg.

One of the doctors in attendance at the hospital stated it was one of the most horrible accidents he had seen in years and he had been practicing for thirty-five years.

The sawing plant was located near the barn yard and the wounds became infected with gas bacilli for which there is no cure, and before she died her body became horribly bloated from the gas. This bacilli, according to the doctor, is not in the air but lies hidden under the ground and became loosed when the ground was tamped up by the saw.

Two Cars Crashed.

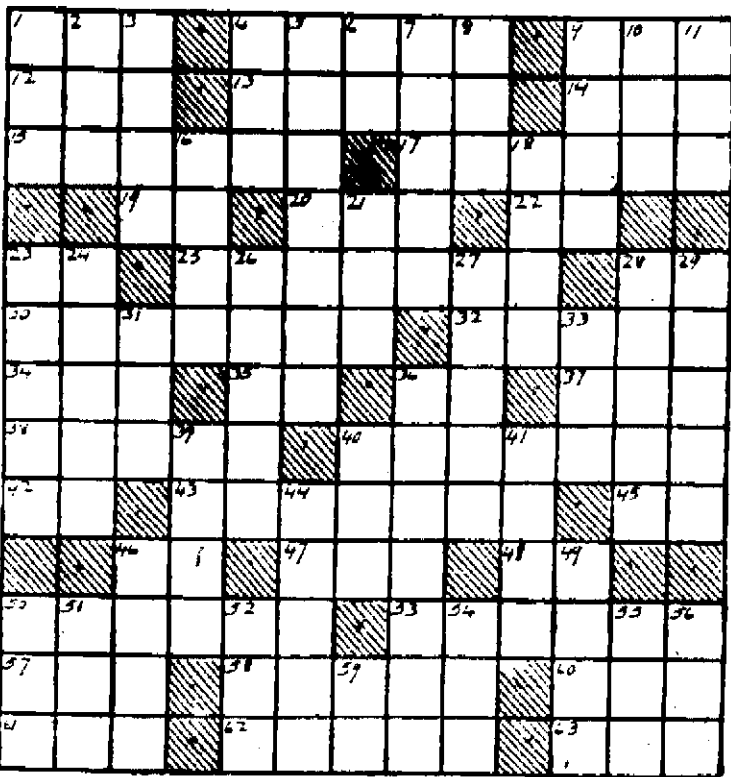

A collision between the automobiles of Don Hrant of 124 South Manor avenue and Andrew Mathela of 17 East Chestnut street on Abel street at Hunter street was reported to the police this morning. Both cars were considerably damaged.

Schwartz Buys Manila Property.

Harry Schwartz, merchant tailor, of 70 North Front street, has purchased the Morris Manila residence property at 97 Fair street. Mr. Manila having moved to Los Angeles, California.

RISK LIVES IN LONG CANOE TRIP

Students Descend Alaska Coast From Skagway in Daily Peril.

Portland, Ore.—Innumerable perils and adventures to surfeit the most daring were encountered by Amos Burg, Jr., of Portland and Fred A. Hill of Spokane on a 3,000-mile boat trip that they have just ended. They started at Skagway, Alaska, with Portland their destination, but their course took them inland, over almost unknown waters, as well as down the treacherous coast line of Alaska.

It required almost four months from the time that Burg and Hill showed off in their 18-foot canoe from the historic mining town of Skagway until they landed in a branch of the Columbia river near Portland.

Meanwhile they had propelled their frail craft for 1,000 miles through the tricky currents of the inland passage of Alaska, had gone up the Fraser river until they could no longer make progress against its swift current and then had portaged to Upper Columbia lake, between the Rocky and Selkirk mountains. From that lake they followed the course of the Columbia to Portland.

First Canoe Trip Over Route.

It was the first time that anyone has ever taken a canoe over this route. Burg, who is a student at Oregon Agricultural college, already was a famous canoeist. Before his recent trip he had traveled the Columbia throughout its entire length and was the only one to do so. He had other similar honors to his credit, but the voyage just ended eclipsed them all. His companion, Hill, is a young sailor, who no sooner reached Portland than he sought passage to the Orient.

It is a daring navigator who will trust his life to a canoe in the Pacific off Alaska, where the currents eddy around the countless islands and the tide whips in and out to toss a small boat around like a plaything.

There were many close calls as the young adventurers went down the Alaska coast, increased by frequent excursions into narrow inlets and bays so that they might photograph glaciers and other scenic phenomena.

"We were stranded in Gastineau channel, above Juneau, so that we were unable to land," related Burg. "We were racing the tide, trying to get into Juneau, but there were so many islands and inlets we had gone six miles beyond the town. We finally had to leave our canoe, which was stranded high and dry when the tide went out, and wade through mire up to our hips to a spot where we could rest. We were so exhausted that we went to sleep, and when we awoke our canoe was staked in more than ten feet of water. We thought we had lost it, but managed to get a fisherman's boat and rescue it."

At another time they were held prisoners for five days, without food, in an inlet by the stormy water, with waves coming in 15 and 20 feet high. They killed a fish duck and clubbed a porcupine for ration.

Ran Into Furious Storms.

"All along the Alaska coast there were thrills in plenty," continued Burg. "We ran into several furious storms and it rained a great deal. We encountered many bears and they raided our larder repeatedly."

"Most thrilling of all the trip was the battling of tides to enter and leave the salt lakes formed by narrow-necked inlets. The inner regions of the inlets were large and contained much water, so when the tide fell outside the water rushed through the narrow mouths like waterfalls, making it almost impossible for us to enter, to photograph mountains and glaciers."

The ascent of the Fraser and the descent of the Columbia were hardly less interesting.

"After we portaged and resumed our trip at Upper Columbia lake there were 107 rapids to be run or portaged around before we reached Portland," said Burg.

When the canoe, which had been named "Song of the Wind" ended its journey the young men had lost nearly everything they started with.

On the whole it was one of the most remarkable canoe trips on record. In spite of its hardships, both of the young men enjoyed it, and Burg expects to make other record canoe journeys in the future.

Bishop Manning Favors Sunday Sports
If They Do Not Conflict With Worship

Tells Recreation Association Play Instinct is Divinely Implanted.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 20 (A. P.).—Speaking before the Thirteenth Congress of the Playground and Recreation Association here last night Bishop William T. Manning of New York outlined his creed of the gospel of play.

"Recreation has a direct bearing upon our moral and spiritual development," he said, "and so I feel that the church should give its open sanction and blessing to clean and wholesome sport."

"Some of you may not agree with me, but I hold that wholesome recreation and amateur sport may have its right and proper place on Sunday provided it does not take the place of prayer and worship on that day. The instinct for play is as divinely implanted in human nature as the instinct for work and the instinct for worship. The church must not merely tolerate clean sport and recreation, but give them its glad and open blessing."

TEMPERATE VOTERS.

The campaign for the election of a United States Senator presents an opportunity for the much bedeviled temperate majority of voters, regardless of party, to assert themselves and administer a stinging rebuke to the intemperate minorities who are constantly abusing everyone not in accord with their own narrow views.

There is only one temperate candidate for the office and that is Senator Wadsworth. Senator Wadsworth is for temperance, not drunkenness or bone dry prohibition. He favors a sane course of regulation by laws that are not so drastic that they cannot be enforced, but that will tend to make our nation temperate. He has the courage of his convictions and reasons for his opinions. His statements are plain and fearless and his plans constructive. He deals in no epithets and does not denounce those who disagree with him.

Against Senator Wadsworth are two intemperate candidates. Wagner is intemperately "wet" in principle. He is of the type that would not only bring back the saloon but would permit the saloon to run "hog wild," without real restraint and certainly without any regulation that would promote the advance of temperance.

Mr. Cristman, the "bone dry" candidate, does not seem to have an idea on any subject except the hobby that is his platform. He is as intemperate as Wagner, but at the extreme other end of the question. Where Wagner would have the country wet as the Atlantic ocean and without restraint or regulation, Cristman would have it dry as Sahara and with the most oppressive and senseless restrictive laws that would not and could not be enforced.

Temperate and sane voters, who are weary of being annoyed by the clamor of "wet" or "dry" fanatics, have the opportunity to assert themselves, strengthen the cause of true temperance and further the adoption of constructive and enforceable regulatory measures, regardless of party, casting their votes for Senator Wadsworth.

Why not try to do something that can be done, instead of wasting further effort on attempting to do something that cannot be done and that only furthers corruption and scandal and disregard for all laws?

PRATT NEVER FAILS.

In the adjoining county of Sullivan, one of five counties comprising this Congressional district, a school girl in the small town of Woodridge wrote to Congressman Harcourt J. Pratt for information to aid her in completing an essay. Within forty-eight hours she possessed the desired material and a courteous letter from the Congressman. One may imagine that the girl displayed this letter with pardonable pride, for in a few days Congressman Pratt received letters from many of her classmates. That the students were surprised and delighted to hear from a United States Representative was clearly evident. As one of them stated: "Some of my classmates have already written to you and told me how friendly and obliging you were, at which I was quite surprised, as my idea of a Congressman was of a rather formidable person."

Nothing better typifies the quality and character of service Congressman Pratt has rendered this district in his first term in Washington. One of the blessings of the government under which we live is that our public officials are within convenient reach of every citizen, regardless of his station in life, and thus entirely cognizant of, if not always actually responsive to, public demands. To Congressman Pratt, a message from a resident of this district is a signal for action, and it is a tribute to his philosophy of conduct in office that no communication received by him has gone unanswered. The completion of Congressional correspondence is as varied as the hues of a rainbow—though not always so pleasing—and to Congressman Pratt's desk has flowed an incessant stream of messages from persons in every walk of life, some Republicans, some Democrats, some Protestants, some Socialists. All have "wanted something."

To these pleas, Congressman Pratt

has turned a receptive ear. He has made the business of his constituents his business. He has made an honest and intelligent effort to respond in the manner desired. He has found time to carry on this service while at the same time discharging ably and conscientiously the larger duties of his office on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the room of the important committee, that on agriculture, of which he is a member. How well he has served is common knowledge in thousands of homes, offices and shops, and it may be safely stated that many a "grown-up" has, like the Woodridge school girl, felt a glow of satisfaction over the ready response of the Representative. In this day when writing to your Congressman is a popular diversion, that official is more than the spokesman of the majority sentiment of his district. He is, almost literally, at the beck and call of every individual in his bailiwick. That Congressman Pratt fully appreciates this fact has been proved on countless occasions. The people of this district will make no mistake in retaining his services in Washington.

NOT ALWAYS INDIGESTION.

You read in the papers from time to time of men and women stricken down suddenly, and death was ascribed to ptomaine poisoning, or perhaps acute indigestion.

A Boston or rather Brookline physician contends that many of these sudden attacks are really due to a heart condition. The vessels supplying the blood to the heart are sometimes thickened, so that the flow is not sufficient to nourish the heart, and it gradually weakens and finally stops.

Fortunately, if a physician is called, he recognizes the symptoms of this condition, and can safeguard to some extent the future health of the individual.

Ordinarily, as this physician points out, "the picture is that of a middle-aged person suddenly stricken with a severe pain under his breast bone, or over his stomach, and nothing, not even morphine, seems to relieve that pain. The face is anxious, of an ashy color, clammy skin, and rapid, feeble pulse." You can readily see that this is not unlike an attack of indigestion or ptomaine poisoning. However, there are other symptoms as to blood pressure, temperature, condition of blood and so forth, that only the physician can recognize and appreciate. Therefore it would be a wise proceeding to call in a physician for any and all of these attacks. If it is a simple case of indigestion the physician can give relief in a shorter time, and should it be the heart condition, the physician's treatment is absolutely essential.

A heart case of this kind, from which the patient recovers, mistaken for indigestion, gives a feeling of security regarding the heart that might prove fatal at the next attack. The treatment is complete rest in bed, even if morphine or other medicines are needed to keep the patient absolutely quiet. He should be kept in bed for six weeks. These attacks are sometimes due to a small portion of tissue actually blocking or partly blocking the vessel so that there is not sufficient supply of blood to the heart to keep up the strength of the heart itself.

Of course, most sudden attacks are not heart attacks, and are therefore not dangerous, but it would be well for us to remember the warning of this physician, and call in the family doctor.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.

Charter of Liberties Signed and Proclaimed by Governor Dongan, October 30, 1683.

Sir Edmund Andros had ruled with vigor as governor of New York about nine years; he had kept peace with the Iroquois Confederacy, crushed religious enthusiasts, frowned upon every sign of republicanism, and asserted with great tenacity the power of the Duke of York, his master, within the chartered limits of his territory.

Meanwhile the Duke had listened to the appeals of the inhabitants of New York and heeded the judicious advice of his intimate friend, William Penn, to give the people more liberty, and he sought an able and enlightened governor to take the place of Andros.

He found such a man in Thomas Dongan, a younger son of an Irish baronet, and then about fifty years of age. He was a Roman Catholic, enterprising and active, a "man of integrity, moderation and gentlemanly manners."

Dongan had served in the British army, then with the French, attaining the rank of colonel, and had been lieutenant governor of Tangier.

Under instructions from the Duke, Dongan ordered an election of a General Assembly of Representatives of the people, their number not to exceed eighteen. Their functions were to assist the governor and council in framing laws. They were to be allowed free debate among themselves in considering proposed laws. Thus the people of New York were the first to be allowed to share the colonial political authority.

The first General Assembly of the Province of New York met October 17, 1683. It was composed of ten councillors and seventeen representatives of the people, and met in the City Hall when they were addressed by Governor Dongan, whose sympathies were in unison with the popular desires.

The Assembly organized by choosing the experienced Matthew Nicolls, speaker and John Spragg clerk. It sat three weeks and passed fourteen acts, all of which were assented to by the governor, with the advice of his Council.

The first act passed by the representative assembly was entitled "The Charter of Liberties and Privileges, granted by his Royal Highness, to the Inhabitants of New York and its Dependencies." It declared that the supreme legislative power should forever be and reside in the governor, council and people, met in General Assembly; that every freeman and freewoman should be allowed to vote for representatives without restraint; that no freeman should suffer but by judgment of his peers; that all trials should be by a jury of twelve men; that no tax should be assessed, on any pretence whatever, but by the consent of the Assembly; that no seaman or soldier should be quartered on the inhabitants against their will; that no martial law should exist; and that no person professing faith in God, by Jesus Christ, should at any time be anywise disqualified or questioned for any difference of opinion.

Not a single feature of the intolerance and bigotry of the New England charters appeared in this first "Charter of Liberties" for the province of New York. The despotism under which the people had so long groaned had taught them a just consideration for the liberty of others. This most important act was signed by Governor Dongan, October 30, 1683, and proclaimed before the City Hall.

The next act provided for the division of the Province into twelve counties or shires. Their names are still retained, but their territorial dimensions have been modified by the erection of new counties; these were as follows:

The City and County of New York included all Manhattan Island, and several adjacent islands.

Westchester County embraced the territory eastward of Manhattan to the Connecticut River, and north along the Hudson River to the Highlands. Dutchess County extended from Westchester northward to Albany County, and "into the woods twenty miles." Orange County extended from New Jersey northward along the Hudson River to Murderer's Creek, and westward to the Delaware River.

Ulster County extended from the northern boundary of Orange County, along the river to Saugerties, and "twenty miles into the woods." Albany County extended indefinitely northward from Rochester's Kill on the east side of the river, and on the west side from Saugerties northward to "the Saraghtagos." Richmond County included Staten Island, and two or three smaller islands.

Kings and Queens counties occupied the western portion of Long Island from Oyster Bay and Hempstead. Suffolk embraced the balance of Long Island. Cornwall County embraced the duke's possession at Pemaquid in Maine, and Duke's County included the islands off the coast of Massachusetts.

Richest Country in the World Has Its Quota of Suffering; Red Cross Active in Relief Work

THE richest nation in the world—that is the accepted picture of the United States, a land where every man owns an automobile. But a study of the work of the American Red Cross, the foremost agency of relief human service within the borders of this prosperous land.

Norman B. Harris, Chairman of the Red Cross Committee of the National Fraternal Congress, before the last session of that body, cited authentic statistical data showing that 1,000,000 people in the United States are sick at all times; that 1,250,000 people died last year in this country from sickness; while 187,000 children died under one year of age; that all told, the national economic loss from sickness and death in 1924 probably reached five billion dollars.

By other sources, it has been estimated that 75 per cent of the nation's school children are suffering from physical defects which in general are serious enough to retard both their physical development and their progress in school.

Figures such as these indicate that there is need for something to be done. The Public Health Service estimates that it would require $20,000,000 to provide for adequate rural health service throughout the United States but that this expenditure would save a billion dollars annually, based on cost of preventable illness, loss of earnings, and value of human life.

The American Red Cross contribution towards meeting this vital need by maintaining throughout the country, a staff of more than 825 Red Cross Public Health Nurses. Stationed in communities all over the country they care for the sick, assist in disease prevention, and teach adults and children alike the fundamentals of health. Periodic inspections of school children by these nurses reduce the danger of epidemics, and detect physical defects in children which, with prompt treatment, often prevent more serious ailments. Statistically these nurses made more than a million visits to homes during the last year, in carrying out their mission of health. Among other services, they instructed approximately 65,000 women and girls in home hygiene and other subjects affecting health in the home. To maintain this service, the National Headquarters of the American Red Cross and local Chapters together expended a total of $371,000 on Public Health nursing, and a total of $142,000 on Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick services, from July 1, 1925, to June 30, this year. The value in improved health, and preventable suffering to the communities thus served, can readily be estimated.

Nurses Prove Value

Besides the continuing task of fighting disease and developing public health, the Red Cross meets the liability to sudden emergency duty by maintaining an enrolled nursing reserve of 42,576 Red Cross nurses, who may be called on for service in the disasters which so suddenly strike the country, while acting as a reserve for the Army Nurse Corps, the Navy and U. S. Public Health Service. During the hours following the explosion of the Navy Arsenal near Dover, N. J., last July, a detachment of Red Cross nurses hurriedly assembled, established an emergency hospital in which 36 injured received treatment after being brought from the danger zone.

The knowledge that there is a surprisingly large percentage of under-serviced school children, and even adults, in the United States, furnishes the Red Cross another opportunity for a contribution to national health and well-being. Realizing that this condition is not always due to poverty, but in many cases to a lack of understanding of the relation of food to health, the Red Cross developed its Nutrition Service, which the past year alone instructed 4,000 adults and 114,000 children in this subject.

Helps War-Disabled

Practical and invaluable as are such services to the country, the predominating demand for Red Cross administration the past year has come from the disabled veterans, their families, and those still serving their country. In the year from July, 1925, to June, 1926, the Red Cross served an average of 33,000 disabled veterans and their families every month, while maintaining contact with the 242,000 men still in active service.

Why this major need of Red Cross service should continue in such a quarter eight years after the Armistice, is due to a number of natural factors. Among them is the fact that the further war recedes, the more difficult it is to carry out such duties, owing to the dispersion of the veterans over the country, with resulting obstacles to establishing necessary and just claims to Government benefits, acquisition of family responsibilities on the part of the veterans, and other changes in their situation due to passage of time.

A typical case encountered in Red Cross service the past year, was that of a dying veteran whose legally due claims of certain benefits for his family depended on affidavits of a physician on the other side of the continent. To procure this necessary document in time, it was necessary for an aviator to win a cross-continent race with death, then for a Red Cross representative in that part of the country to place together minute details before the physician could reach the case and supply the needed paper, which was then rubbed back to the veteran by air mail in time to establish his case properly.

Many opportunities for Red Cross service arise through the compelling number of otherwise well-informed men and women, many of them dependents of deceased veterans, who are suffering in ignorance of the compensatory provisions which the Government has enacted for them. It is the responsibility of the Red Cross to make these cases known, and to help the dependents, who are often in the country, knowing that they were entitled to Government benefits which would partly at least relieve their burdens. The Red Cross has helped such cases, and not alone such dependents, but the veterans themselves, who have not realized that a just Government had provided for legitimate claims upon it, but could not of itself locate all those entitled to and in need of such help.

Vets Service Leads

Judged from scope of work involved and size of appropriations, the Red Cross work for disabled and other service men and women, and their dependents easily overshadows its other responsibilities. In the past year expenditures under this head approximated a total of $4,020,000. Of this amount, National Headquarters appropriated $1,637,000 for disabled veterans alone, and $2,383,000 for men in active service, while local Red Cross Chapters expended $2,937,000 for both classes.

A map which hangs in the National Headquarters building in Washington furnishes a clue to what is undoubtedly the most spectacular of all Red Cross duties—that of relief in disaster.

This map, by means of symbols, shows the location and nature of every disaster to strike the country in the past year, in which the Red Cross served. The frequency of these symbols in the country's out-lying areas, and the manner in which they are scattered over the map, indicate the basis of the Red Cross problem—to be prepared at any time, and for any place, because disaster may happen anywhere, and it seldom warns of its coming.

Meets Disaster Needs

The Red Cross served the country in approximately 55 disasters in the year which ended in June, 1926. The munitions explosion in Jersey gave the organization a characteristic situation of its kind. In this case not only was National Headquarters well represented, but the local Red Cross Chapters in the affected area demonstrated their preparedness for unexpected demands, and their ability to cope with emergency. In this operation the Red Cross forces treated 86 injured, provided emergency feeding for upwards of 800 refugees, provided shelter; and at the conclusion of the danger period, undertook permanent rehabilitation for more than 455 people in need of such assistance as a result of the destruction.

This disaster emphasized the usefulness of the volunteer services which are an important phase of many Red Cross activities. Among such services are the units of the Red Cross Motor Corps. In the Jersey explosion, the Motor Corps groups from Trenton, Newark, Madison, and other Chapters in the territory near the scene of the catastrophe, performed valuable service. Sufferers knitted by volunteers were sent in quantities for the troops called out for emergency duty in the zone, to supplement their light summer uniforms against the suddenly cold weather.

From January 1 to August 1, the instructions aboard this car brought aid to a total of 59,771 persons, while 19,000 persons threatened the country received aid and qualified first aid experts.

Despite such varied demands in their own country, Americans still must observe an obligation to the rest of the world, and this they do through the medium of their Red Cross organization.

The American Red Cross is an Important member of the League of Red Cross Societies composed of the world, and promotes the progress of world wide Red Cross service. In recognition of a typical American Red Cross relief service abroad in the name of the United States, the Belgian Red Cross presented the American organization with a beautiful silver medal, with an expression of Belgian gratitude for the American assistance during floods in that country this year.

Many Volunteers

One of the most important of all volunteer services is that of transcribing Braille-typed reading material for the blind. More than 60 per cent of all Braille transcribing in the United States is done by Red Cross volunteer workers. In the past year volunteers in Red Cross Chapters completed 1,333 volumes comprising 126,599 pages of such matter.

Other services of Red Cross volunteers include the Canteen Corps, production of hospital garments and surgical dressings, staff assistance, home services, health work, and other duties contributing to community well-being.

The intensity of American life has resulted in a demand for one Red Cross function strongly reminiscent of the war origin of the organization—first aid instruction. The automobile in city streets, the accident on the highway, the nation's industrial life, all are responsible for an accident rate which would be even more deadly were it not for Red Cross first aid instruction. Accordingly one of the strongest services of the Red Cross is that branch which goes throughout the country, training thousands annually to combat accident with prompt treatment. As an instance of this work among the nation's industries alone, a staff of Red Cross instructors, utilizing their famous railroad car, in six days last summer taught more than 2,000 railroad shopmen first aid for every kind of accident. The car traveled over 400 miles of the Union Pacific railroad during this time, stopping at strategic points for instruction purposes.

From January 1 to August 1, the instructions aboard this car brought aid to a total of 59,771 persons, while 19,000 persons threatened the country received aid and qualified first aid experts.

Despite such varied demands in their own country, Americans still must observe an obligation to the rest of the world, and this they do through the medium of their Red Cross organization.

Another flood in Mexico early the past year took approximately 1,000 lives, and the suffering on that occasion at once awoke American sympathy expressed through our Red Cross organization, together with very practical assistance to the Mexican authorities in coping with the destruction. A flood in the Netherlands during the same period next claimed American assistance, which, as usual, was despatched through the Red Cross. These are merely representative of American service abroad, through the recognized relief agency of the United States.

Disasters within our insular territories, especially in the Philippines, are cared for by the Insular Chapters, the Philippines possessing a noteworthy organization which functions on a large scale. Aside from the work of this fine Chapter in the occasional catastrophes which strike the islands, that group maintains 61 Public Health nurses for fighting disease and carrying out generally the mission performed by such nurses in the continental United States.

Closely allied with the foreign work of the Red Cross, and playing a major role in developing American contacts around the world, are more than 5,000,000 American members of the Junior Red Cross, an organization sponsored by the American Red Cross proper, and which has representative groups in nearly every country of the world.

The work of these young people has been hailed throughout the world as one of the most promising movements towards eventual complete understanding between nations, ever inaugurated.

The history of Red Cross operations in the United States alone, during the past year, thus demonstrates that even a rich country like the United States needs a well-organized band ready at all times, and that when its own borders are free of trouble, those of another nation may claim our sympathy. The work of the past year's efforts may be pictured financially by the fact that the American Red Cross expended a total of $11,576,000 in the year closing June 30, 1926, of which amount, the largest single item went for assistance to disabled veterans and other service men or their families.

While the Red Cross is the officially designated agency of relief for the American people, it of course derives no support from the Government, but its work is made possible entirely through membership. The opportunity to become identified with all the Red Cross work, through membership is extended from November 11th to 24th this year, in the Annual Roll Call.

THE FIRST SNOW MAN

The First Snow Man.

"You may all be as pleased as you like with this thing or with that," said the first Snow Man, "but I am as delighted as a creature could be."

"Here I am the first Snow Man around these parts. In a way I feel like an early settler, or a discoverer, or a pioneer, or something grand that way."

"Yes, I heard all about those people, pioneers, and settlers and discoverers, and all."

"You see, I am outside a school window, and you have no idea the education that comes right out of the window to me."

"It is considered very healthy these days, and it is very healthy to have windows open, so they open the school window a bit and the education comes right out to me."

"I don't have to go to school and melt with the effect inside learning would have on me."

"I stay here and keep cool and learn just the same."

"You see, there are those discoverers who go off and see countries for the first time, or they discover wonders no one has discovered before."

"Then there are pioneers who are the first to break through a new country and brave the hard conditions to push ahead."

"And there are the early settlers who come forth with their wives and their families and settle themselves in a new country and develop it and make it produce."

"Now, that is the way I feel. Not perhaps as much as the really real pioneers and settlers and discoverers felt, but in a slighter and lesser degree."

"I am the first snow man of the season. There has not been enough snow to make many snow men. They have had to wait out for me as it has really not been very cold."

"But they have done their best for me and here I am, ready to withstand a few warm days for the sake of being the first snow man."

"I let them try to freeze me at night, for I am the first snow man, and I want to be strong and stand here by the school house and become wise."

"I have an old pill upon my head. It is not a wonderful pill, but it gives me a fine appearance."

"I look like something out of the ordinary, and the way a first snow man should look."

"Later, when there is lots of snow there are lots of snow men and snow forts and snow houses and there are all sorts of things made out of snow."

"But you have a certain amount of importance when you are the first snow man."

"Good," said King Snow. "I am glad I was able to give you the honor—with the aid of the children in the school."

"So the first Snow Man stood outside the school, with a pill upon his head, feeling very fine and very superior, and quite, quite intelligent."

"And as the days dashed along, before the real, real winter came, little Maillie, who always had so much to do, and enjoyed every thing that she did so much, sighed and said:

"Oh dear, the days need to walk along. But now they just run away from me. Here it is almost winter, and just the other day it was summer, it seemed."

"And the first Snow Man laughed to himself to think of the days really running away."

"He knew better than that, even though he was only a snow man and received his education through the open window."

Name for Baby
Little Charlie Wood, five, was present when his parents were wondering what his father's brother would name their new baby boy. Charlie was interested, and looked up, with a twinkle in his eye, exclaiming:
"I think a good name would be 'Kindling'."

Learning How
Boo—I'll teach you to take out screens with a chair!
Store Boy—I wish you would, sir. I couldn't make 'em turn, myself—Good Hardware.

Appetizing
Little Girl—Oh, mommy! That's a funny-looking fish. What kind is it?
Mother—That's a jelly-fish, dear.
Little Girl—Jelly! What's that?

OFFICE CAT

Sweetest Words.

The baby is asleep now. Here's that book I borrowed. You gave me too much money, here's your change.

Certainly, we can give you two aisle seats, center, in the second row. That story you told was the best one.

As a general rule congress adjourns about the same time the regular circus season starts.

Him. "You look like a sensible girl. Let's get married."

Her. "Nothing doing. I'm just as sensible as I look."

Mr. Jones. "I'm going to bring young Windy Wolf, Jr. home tonight."

Mrs. Jones. "Why, we haven't a thing to eat in the house, the cook is intoxicated, baby has the colic and mother is coming!"

"Yes, that's why I'm going to bring him home! The young fool is thinking of getting married."

It is cheaper to buy a ready-made suit unless you count the labor required to remove the tags.

Sam Hoskins accidentally shot himself while hunting. One of the wounds is fatal but his friends are glad to hear that the other one is not serious.

It is natural for boys to follow the line of least resistance, especially if it's the waist line.

Ancient Slang.

Do you remember years ago—Of course, I know you do; When things that didn't please you were "Twenty-three, Skiddle?"

Another old-time saying. Among the mist is hid; Where'er we saw a chicken. The cry was, "Oh, you kid!"

And when you were disgusted. With things that were all bosh; You didn't swear but merely said, "By cracky" or "oh, gosh!"

Even now "The cat's pajamas," "Applesauce," "Fat tires" and such are not quite the berries.

Use new ones or get "in Dutch."

That still, small voice which you may think is conscience may only be the radio machine with a weak battery.

"Walter, I'll have pie a la mode. And waiter, plenty of mode on the pie!"

Paw says the best way to get rid of bedbugs is to chase them up the spiral bed springs till they get dizzy and then suffocate them with a sock.

I believe that the only person I ever actually tortured before I killed was the landlady who neglected to provide a lock for her bathroom door.

A man can forgive his enemies, but he has to call on the Lord for help to forgive his fool friends.

Officer—What are you doing here at this hour?
Stranger—I forgot my key, officer, and I'm waiting for the children to come home and let me in.

A suit that sells at a cut price usually has no other argument in its favor.

"When I was a small boy, I was left an orphan."

"What did you do with it?"

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

The Office of Sheriff

ARTHUR RICE.

This office represents the enforcement of the law. The processes in all actions, the arrest and custody of criminals and the quelling of riots are some of the responsibilities placed upon the shoulders of the person elected to fill this important position.

In the selection of such person public confidence in the man who is to have charge of the sheriff's office is of the highest importance among the many qualifications required.

Public confidence is not created in a day nor during the heat of a political campaign, but it is acquired as the result of the daily work and actions of a man, which constitutes his life's record. It is not faith, it is not position that inspire confidence but the man himself.

Arthur Rice has the public confidence.

He had it among the boys at No. 1 Public School, which was the first school he attended, at the age of 6 years and from there to Ulster Academy. A cigar manufacturer for number of years, eight years as marshal of the City of Kingston, and probation officer of the City of Kingston afforded opportunities for the public generally to appraise his worth.

A man's character is not limited to his business activities. Sportsmanship is a sure index of character. The public have had abundant opportunity to know the sportsmanship of Arthur Rice. Baseball is the great popular national game, and Arthur Rice was one of the best players ever in the City of Kingston. It was not alone his fine playing, but his honesty, fairness, his refusal to do any underhand or unfair act made him one of the most popular baseball players in this city. His conduct in this great game showed his character.

He was the coach of the baseball players in the High School, and the boys are now his enthusiastic supporters for the high office of sheriff.

He is a member of the Rountout Masonic Lodge and of the Kingston Elks.

He served the people of this County two terms as a supervisor from the City of Kingston.

The people know when he fills the office of sheriff, that the office will be conducted honestly and fairly, and to the complete satisfaction of the public. That the reason he is receiving such hearty support throughout Ulster County by both Democrats and Republicans who believe in a square deal.

Keep Hair Tidy, Keep It Curly

By Edna Walker Hopper

Summer and winter my hair is ever wavy. It is tidy, but fluffy. It has a glow. Yet I never visit a hairdresser. Never have a Marcel wave.

These results are due to a hair dress which great experts made especially for me. I apply it twice a week. It doubles the beauty of my hair in an hour. And that wave and sheen remain.

Now you can obtain the same product. All toilet counters supply it. An Edna Walker Hopper's Wave and Flare. The price is low. My guarantee comes with each bottle so you take no risk.

This is a delight—one of the best things I ever found for women, especially those with bobbed hair. Go try it now.

Famous Whiskers

Probably the most noted of all whiskers, past and present, were those of the great Chinese philosopher Confucius. It was popularly believed that possession of a hair from his face would impart great wisdom to the holder. So eagerly were his whiskers sought after that it became necessary to pass a law forbidding the plucking, removing or transportation of his whiskers. The history of whiskers and beard reveals that men have worn them to look intellectual, that the weak wore them to look strong, that the old wore them to look young, that the homely wore them to look handsome, and that cowards wore them to look brave.—Pittsburgh Magazine.

Odd Mixture of Waters

A strange, three-layer arrangement of water has been revealed by recent hydrographic investigation of the Faroe-Shetland channel, north of Scotland. The layers are so distributed that a swimmer in the channel could take his choice of swimming in Atlantic ocean water at the surface or driving into the Norwegian sea which flows at the bottom, while between top and bottom he could enjoy a mixture of the two kinds of water with a dash of Icelandic Arctic current added to the blend. The observations of the channel have recently been reported to the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea.

Warner Baxter

Warner Baxter, prominent in the "movies," first became interested in theatricals while attending school in Columbus, Ohio, where he was born. Later he became associated with stock companies, finally signing a contract with a motion picture concern. His latest pictures include "Welcome Home," "Rugged Water," "A Son of His Father," and "The Best People." He is 5 feet 11 inches tall, has brown eyes and brown hair.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

THE SOW THISTLE

WHEN the sow thistle drops its blossoms it is a sure sign of rain. This superstition, according to the Journal of the American Folk Lore Society, exists in the southern states; very likely the reader will know of its existence in other sections of the country. As far as the writer can find out, it is the only survival in this country of the many superstitions connected with the sow thistle in Europe, where from time immemorial it has been a magic plant.

Though not indigenous to this continent the sow thistle—or swine thistle as it is sometimes called—is now widely distributed here. The name that the immigrant has brought with it is reminiscent of one of the magic attributes with which it is accredited in the Old world, where sprigs of it are nailed inside the pig troughs so that the swine may profit by the magical virtues which it imparts to their food. In Europe, as in America, the sow thistle is able to foretell the rain.

The legend of the discovery of the virtues of the plant in question is evidently more modern than the superstitions which pertain to it. The legend says that in a time of drought and a visitation of the plague, Charlemagne was bitten by an angel in a dream to shoot an arrow into the air; whatever that arrow lighted upon would cure the plague. Charlemagne followed directions and his arrow lighted upon a clump of sow thistle. By royal proclamation the people ate sow thistle and the plague disappeared; presumably the rain fell also. It is evident that the sow thistle was one of the many "lightning plants" of the old Germans—plants which were supposed to be engendered, or at least fructified, by lightning, and lightning is, as a rule, accompanied by rain. In the use of the plant in connection with hogs so common in Germany, there may be a reminiscence of the pig which was sacrificed to Isis to insure moisture.

As Told by Irvin S. Cobb

WAY TO BEAT THE GAME

THOSE who in their youth were addicted, or subsequently have been addicted, to the good old American game of "seven-up" will appreciate a little tale which Frank L. Cobb, chief editorial writer of the New York World, told.

Cobb, who was born in Kansas and reared in Michigan, went to a town in the former state to call upon an elderly uncle on a matter of business. He arrived about supper time. His aunt received him and welcomed him, telling him that her husband would probably be along shortly.

Time passed and still the old gentleman did not appear.

"I wonder," said Cobb, "whether Uncle Henry has been detained at his shop?"

"Oh, no," said his aunt in a resigned tone. "He's down at No. 2 cage house, cleaning bow."

Eleanor Gunn On Fashions

Metal Threads Hack Into Smart Clothes for Many Occasions, and Tailored Effects Have Become Amazingly Feminized Because of the Bloused Waistline.

A little dash of gold braid is approved, especially to enrich velvet or to glorify cloth. There are cloth of gold and silver evening gowns, metallic brocades for the jumper, which, topping a velvet coat, goes to tea or luncheon, and there are in many ways a strong manifestation of the approval of gold, silver and copper.

There are likewise metal lace—lace effects, as they are termed—and there are still many women who consider gold slippers most elegant of all. The season's requirements call for antique gold, for there must be nothing garish, although spangles are allowed to signal and reflect the lights, making many dance gowns brilliant enough to be almost blinding.

A Cloth Dress is Presented in a Softening Military Effect, Resulting From the Use of Battlemented Braiding in Dull Metallic Threads.

A full-skirted dance frock made entirely of twinkling silver spangles is one of the memories of a beautiful collection of imports. To this, one must add a rich velvet flower, one of the nasturtium shades, perhaps, Valencia blue, or any coloring that appeals, including Lavinia's geranium red.

Frocks for day wear are inclined to a somewhat tailored line and may have high collars and belt, yet, because of their bigness of waistline, they never produce a really tailored effect. Seemingly the smart world has grown weary of masculine clothes, although women have formed the habit of purchasing their sweaters over haberdashery counters and of choosing their four-in-hands at the same place. Some women affect suspenders, which have been revived in men's wear, but these are fad rather than a serious fashion. (Copyright, 1926, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service, New York.)

FASHIONABLE FURS MUST BE PLEASANT ENOUGH TO LEAD THEMSELVES TO SUCH MODELING AS IS USUALLY PRODUCED IN CLOTH.

In the natural order of things, which makes a see-saw go up and then down and a pendulum swing as far one way as another, it is time for a revival of cloth coats and a lowering of the feverish interest in fur coats. Such things as threatened strikes, however, make it rather important that fashion and labor unite so that industry may be kept warm.

So we are to have fur coats galore, but fortunately in many new guises.

Vote Much Less Than Registration

ALBANY, Oct. 30.—Getting out the vote next Tuesday will play an important part in the outcome of the election. While there has been a registration this year of 3,617,915 in New York state, a gain of 261,873 over 1922, and a drop of 269,839 over 1924, there will be the usual large percentage who fail to show up at the polls, or whose ballots will go to the voids and blanks. In 1922, out of a registration of 3,266,242, the total vote for governor was but 1,883,961. Blanks and voids that year reached 67,883.

In 1924, a presidential year, there was a registration in this state of 3,357,554, but the actual vote cast for governor was 3,355,825. The number of blanks and voids that year amounted to 88,242.

Figures just compiled show that thirty-five out of the sixty-two counties in this state gained in registration over the 1922 figures. There were eight counties this year in which the registration ran ahead of 1924.

Nemesis

A murder had been done. A crowd gathered outside of the Oriental Photo Picture Palace in Tarrytown. The officers, swarming importantly, rushed in and dragged the criminal out of the building.

"He shot his victim entirely without provocation," in a hushed whisper said a bystander.

"Without provocation—the dick—" spoke up a man who had just come out of the show shop. "The victim kept volunteering information about the actors on the screen and at the same time jabbing the slayer in the ribs with his elbow to fix his attention. I sat back of them and was seeing the edge of my knife, when suddenly the prisoner drew a revolver and shot his assassin dead. 'Now,' he said, 'I guess I can watch the show in peace.'"—Kansas City Star.

Veracity in Frogs

A female frog brought up a family of robins whose mother apparently had been killed. This happened in Llantrillo, Wales, in a hedge bank near the city. All day the frog collected worms and flies for her foster family, pausing only to croak angrily when curious visitors got too near the nest. She showed a true maternal instinct throughout the rearing period.

Beast on Rampage

A woman in the village of Marlbury, Cheshire, England, had three lives of her own, and all went mad recently and attacked her, slaying her severely about the head, limbs and body, and then, turning to the poultry run, they strug to death eight hens and a cockerel.

They then passed on to an adjacent field where they attacked her, causing them to leave their tools in the field in their flight. When evening came on, the entire colony was destroyed to prevent further serious trouble.

Van Sweringens Have New Plan

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—The Van Sweringens brothers of Cleveland are reported to have met opposition to their proposed Nickel Plate railroad merger by dropping the Erie from their plans.

The two former newshoys who are planning a trunk line to compete with the Pennsylvania, New York Central and Baltimore and Ohio now plan to serve Newport News only as a port, and leave New York out of their calculations, the New York Times says today.

Opposition by minority stockholders of the Chesapeake and Ohio to their original plan, which was a primary cause of its rejection by the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been overcome the paper declared, and the proposed merger probably will go before the commission unopposed in its present form. Commercial interests in Norfolk and Newport News feared that traffic to Newport News would be diverted to New York under the original plan. The new combination would make Newport News the only tide-water clearance, however, and it will be developed as a port, the Times says, thus meeting the opposition of these interests.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Oct. 30 (AP).—Frequent shifting of speculative sentiment imparted considerable irregularity to today's market, but the main tendency appeared to be downward. Trading was in small volume, due to the exodus of many traders to out-of-town football games, and to a rather general disposition on the part of others to restrict commitments until after election day.

Unofficial reports that the Erie railroad was to be dropped from the revised "Nickel Plate" consolidation took Wall street by surprise and caused active selling of the Erie stock, which sagged a point or two. On the other hand, Chesapeake and Ohio was in brisk demand, showing a gain of four points at one time. Several of the other high grade shares, such as Union Pacific, Norfolk and Western and Louisville and Nashville were heavy.

Renewal of selling pressure was apparent against U. S. Steel common, General Motors and some of the other recent industrial features, but the net losses, as a rule were small.

The closing was heavy. Total sales approximated 500,000 shares. Quotations given by C. D. Halsey & Co., 27 William street, New York city, branch office, Warren Building, 260-62 Fair street, Kingston, N. Y.

CATSKILL CITIZENS WANT NEW FIRE ALARM SYSTEM.

The fire alarm system of Catskill is totally inadequate, say many of the residents of that village, and the village board is now wrestling with the problem of what would be a serviceable manner of informing the residents and especially the members of the fire companies of fire hazards that occur in the community without having to spend too much of the taxpayers' money. There was a strenuous effort recently which was to be strong enough to issue calls to all sections of the village but it has proved unsatisfactory because of the long-drawn-out battle that take too much time to inform the firemen where the fire exists.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

President Coolidge Asks Nation to Make November 25 a Day of Praise to God—Calls Attention to Nation's Blessings.

Washington, Oct. 30 (AP).—In a Thanksgiving proclamation today President Coolidge asked the nation to make November 25 a day of praise to God for a year in which the United States had been "blessed among the nations of the earth."

The text follows:

By the president of the United States of America

A proclamation.
As a nation and as individuals we have passed another twelve months in the favor of the Almighty. He has smiled upon our fields and they have brought forth plentifully; business has prospered, industries have flourished, and labor has been well employed. While sections of our country have been visited by disaster, we have been spared any great national calamity or pestilential visitation. We are blessed among the nations of the earth.

Our moral and spiritual life has kept measure with our material prosperity. We are not unmindful of the gratitude we owe to God for His watchful care which has pointed out to us the ways of peace and happiness, we should not fail in our acknowledgement of the Divine Father which has bestowed upon so many blessings. Neither should we be forgetful of those among us who, through stress of circumstances, are less fortunately placed, but by deeds of charity make our acknowledgement more acceptable in His sight. Wherefore, I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby set apart Thursday, the 26th day of November, next, as a day of general thanksgiving and prayer and I recommend that on that day the people shall cease from their daily work, and in their homes or in their accustomed places of worship, devoutly give thanks to the Almighty for the many and great blessings they have received, and seek His guidance that through God's deeds and brotherly love they may deserve a continuance of His favor.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the United States.

Done at the City of Washington, this 30th day of October, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six and of the independence of the United States, the one hundred and fifty-first.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.
JOSEPH C. GREW,
Acting Secretary of State.

MRS. JOHN T. PRATT

How Republican women in the city are working in behalf of Ogden L. Mills, Republican candidate for Governor, is illustrated by the activities of Mrs. John T. Pratt, a member of the Board of Aldermen of New York City and Associate Chairman of the Mills Campaign Committee. Mrs. Pratt is at her desk at the Mills Campaign Headquarters in the Hotel Roosevelt from early morning until late in the evening, and her speechmaking activities, from the platform and over the radio, take up what remains of her time.

Beside the honor of being the first woman elected to the Board of Aldermen of New York City, Mrs. Pratt greatly distinguished herself as District Chairman in charge of Women's Activities in connection with the great Liberty Loan Drive in New York. Her success in organizing the women throughout the Second Federal Reserve District in behalf of the loan brought out the qualities of leadership which have marked her career on the board and in Republican organization work.

Pertinent Question

In the locker room of one of the athletic clubs a widely known doctor was leisurely dressing after a strenuous session at handball. First one and then another of his fellow-members brought their minor ailments and injuries to his attention. One fellow who had been dressing came to the doctor turned to him and asked, "Say, Doc, just what are your locker hours?"

Took Rich Territory

On September 29, 1904, Gen. Nelson M. Pike, at the Indian village of the Pawnee, Kansas, carried the Spanish flag to be lowered and the United States flag to be raised. This was the official act of possession of the country west of Missouri.

Brewster Expects A Court Battle

Los Angeles, Oct. 30 (AP).—The romance of Eugene V. Brewster, millionaire magazine publisher, and his screen protegee, Corliss Palmer, which began several years ago after the girl had won a beauty contest conducted by one of his publications and culminated recently in their marriage at Ensenada, Mexico, faced more difficulties today.

In his home here, with his bride of two days living in a nearby house with her mother, Brewster said he was momentarily expecting the former Mrs. Brewster, whom he recently divorced in Mexico, to launch a court battle to set aside the decree and to cause annulment of his marriage to the beauty contest winner.

His former wife, Mrs. Eleanor Brewster, now lives in New York. Until his former wife's intentions are definitely known, the publisher declared, all plans for a honeymoon and for housekeeping are being held up. He declared he was not living apart from his bride because of fear that the contest of the divorce action and marriage in Mexico will be successful but because he wishes to avoid possible embarrassment to his new mate.

Good and Evil Omens Surround Honey Bees

Many women are interesting themselves in the art and business of beekeeping, and with skillful management it can be made a profitable industry. Much ancient lore is associated with the keeping of honey bees. They must be told when there is a death or wedding in the household, and their habits of swarming are omens of good or evil. If they swarm on the ground or on a dead tree someone is going to die, or there will be a famine, or something dreadful will happen. It is astonishing that country people ever kept bees if they believed in superstitions so liable as these to make them uncomfortable. They do not worry the modern beekeeper, for, like everything else, the business has been modernized and the old village straw beehive-maker has gone, together with many of the curious observances associated with beekeeping.

Retrospect of Life Not All Sorrowful

In looking backward over life I sometimes see much of sadness, and feel life to be a rather sorrowful thing; but far, far oftener it is the laughter that I hear, and it is smiling faces that look into mine. Even men who are hateful, even the memories of merciless drivers, are softened for the reason that time effaces their evil, bringing out more and more whatever of pleasantness they had in them. There were very few indeed who meant the evil. At any rate, time shall give them the benefit of the doubt.

Judgment is a poor thing as from man toward man, isn't it? Though I have known human beings, for whom in my heart I can find no respect or love, perhaps the Almighty can. I do not doubt that such is the case, and to him I will leave the judgments.—Bill Adams in Adventure Magazine.

Famous Oxford College

Oriel college, one of the oldest colleges of Oxford university, was founded 600 years ago by Edward II and Adam de Brome, a priest and chancery lawyer, who held a post at St. Mary's Oxford, now the University church. The paragon formed, with other buildings, the nucleus of the college of the Blessed Mary in Oxford, commonly known as Oriel, says the Vancouver Province. The origin of the name "Oriel" is lost in antiquity.

Reconciliation With

Charles Kaye reads in a story of Colonel Roosevelt's ready wit. The colonel was visiting Tuskegee Institute in company with Booker T. Washington, and wished to meet all of the staff. Finally the assistant librarian and her little daughter were presented to him. "Mrs. Rivers," he acknowledged, smiling his well-known smile, and extending his hand. Then, glancing down at the little girl, he said: "And this, I suppose, is Miss Rivers?"—The Outlook.

Service Men Visit Ulster County

Representatives of Organization of World War Veterans visit haughties and Kingston in interests of Mills, Murphy and Wadsworth.

Don Edwards, World War hero, of New York, and Willard Stephan of Buffalo, another World War veteran, who are making a tour of New York state in the interest of Ogden L. Mills, Vincent B. Murphy and Senator Wadsworth, the only three war veterans nominated on the ticket of either party for state offices this year, were in Kingston Friday afternoon.

While in town they were conducted about the city by Robert G. Groves, an ex-service man and local chairman of the Republican Service League in Ulster county.

Dr. Edwards and Mr. Stephan in the past two weeks have covered some 2,500 miles in New York state by motor, carrying a message to service men and women of the state about the three Republican ex-service candidates.

Visit Local Republicans.

Friday morning they left Oneonta and drove to Catskill and Saugerties where they interviewed local leaders.

Arriving in Kingston shortly after noon, they met and conferred with County Chairman Philip Elting and Secretary John W. Eckert of the Republican County Committee.

They also visited and interviewed Judge George Kaufman, nominee for surrogate, an ex-service man and veteran of the World War; County Clerk John H. Saye and Judge G. D. B. Hasbrouck, Republican candidate for re-election to the Supreme court in this district.

This evening Dan and his buddy will be at Newburgh and from there they will proceed toward New York where they will wind up their campaign.

Although traveling in the interest of the three ex-service men on the State ticket, they are also interested in and working for the entire Republican ticket of the state.

Throughout their travels they have distributed literature calling attention of all voters to the three service men whose names appear on the Republican ticket.

Edwards Made Record.

Perhaps outside of Sergeant Yorke, Dan Edwards is the most outstanding figure of the World War. He is the only man to have received both the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross. He is the second member of his family to have received the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Edwards, widely known and highly popular among New York state veterans, is the hero of Cantigny, a French village which, as a private, he held with a squad of men against a severe bombardment by the Germans from 5:30 o'clock in the morning until midnight May 28, 1918.

He remained in an advanced position, protecting with his fire a line of United States infantry which had fallen back to a more advantageous position and to entrench. Although the three others of the squad were killed, Edwards was severely wounded but refused to be evacuated, remaining alone and continuing to operate his gun until midnight, when finally relieved.

At Soissons on July 18, 1918, although suffering intense pain from serious wounds and crawling into an enemy trench and killed four men and, single-handed, captured four prisoners. While conducting them to the rear one of the prisoners was killed by a high explosive which also shattered Edwards' leg. His bravery became one of the outstanding traditions, not only of his regiment, but of the whole A. E. F.

The Republican Service League, composed of men and women who have served in any of America's wars, was organized at the Republican National Convention at Cleveland, Hanford MacNider, Assistant Secretary of War, is national chairman. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is chairman of the national executive committee.

It has been thoroughly organized in forty states. In New York, under the State Chairmanship of Albert S. Callan of Chatham, the organization has been perfected in practically every county and city of the state.

Vincent Hart of Buffalo is in charge of the League's Headquarters at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York, assisted by H. Stanley Judd.

The League is actively behind the candidacies of Mills, Murphy and Wadsworth.

Ogden L. Mills, Republican nominee for governor, was a major with the Sixth Division who served in the St. Mihiel offensive in the Argonne.

Vincent B. Murphy, candidate for state comptroller, went overseas with the 305th Infantry of the Seventy-seventh Division and was wounded in action on October 14, 1918, at St. Juvins.

Senator Wadsworth served in the Spanish-American War, enlisting as a private in Battery A of the Pennsylvania Light Artillery which was engaged in active service in Porto Rico.

Davis Will Vote Straight Ticket

Assemblyman Davis Answers All Questions, Leaving No Doubt Where He Stands on Political Matters—Votes With His Party.

In answer to criticisms and questions of Captain William R. Kraft to a letter written to the Kingston Leader, which that newspaper did not publish, Assemblyman Millard Davis has written another letter to the Leader which has not been published, in which he answers the questions asked of him.

Assemblyman Davis's letter is as follows.

Kerhonkson, N. Y., Oct. 29, 1926. To the Editor of The Leader:

It is as I thought, you do not wish me to answer Mr. Kraft's questions but you would like to have Mr. Kraft keep on harping on them in an attempt to embarrass me and the Republican Party. You have not yet printed my letter of October 28th, which was handed to you on the afternoon of that day, and yet your issue of the 29th contains a further effort from Mr. Kraft which you obtained after you had read my letter in The Freeman, as you state after eleven o'clock at night. In other words, you let Mr. Kraft try to answer my letter but will not print it. This may be fair but it does not so impress me. Please have the goodness to print my first letter along with this.

It has been stated that a fool can ask a question that a wise man cannot answer. That does not appear quite the case here, however, because I believe I can answer Mr. Kraft's questions and that may let us both out of the impasse.

I realize that these questions are being asked merely in an attempt to embarrass me, with the hope that I will answer one way and lose the votes of those who think differently. However, if my standing in this county is based on the principle that I dare not state my position on any subject because some one might vote against me, then it surely is an insecure position and I might as well know it now.

So here goes—

I will confine myself to the questions raised in Mr. Kraft's statement in today's paper.

I am in favor of a gasoline tax of two cents, without reducing the registration fees, and I want this money to go back into the towns and villages for better roads and so release real property from the great burden of paying for practically all of the roads. To my mind this is a fairer way of raising money to build and maintain the roads. Now Kraft blows hot and cold on this question and states that he wants better roads and still thinks the license tax ought to be a nominal sum, so I will take the trouble right here to ask him again where he expects to get the money.

And why, Mr. Editor, and why, Mr. Kraft, are you so worried over my vote for Senator Wadsworth? Mr. Wadsworth is concededly one of the ablest men in the Senate and has been and is a credit to the Empire State of New York, and if I differ with him on as many as six questions I would not consider that reason enough to put my vote where it would help to elect a Tammany Hall Democrat to the Senate of the United States to represent the agricultural state of New York.

Yes, Mr. Editor, you have guessed right. I am going to vote for Mr. Wadsworth, and to save you the embarrassment of asking any further questions along this line, which you may consider troublesome, I will state for the benefit of both of you that I shall vote the straight Republican ticket.

Now we will take up this referendum question that has worried you so. There must be some doubt in your own minds as to how you will vote on this question, or you would not have been so worried over me. Now that the court of appeals has stated that this is a proper question to submit to the voters I think every voter should express his opinion on this question at the polls, according to whether he thinks it will in any way help to solve the liquor question. Personally I do not and I shall vote "no". But you need not feel, either of you, that this is binding you to vote "no" on the question, and I now state that you need not feel bound by my answer in any particular. You should have a clear conscience and decide this question for yourself.

The next question that worries Mr. Kraft and presumably you, Mr. Editor, is my vote or lack of votes in the Assembly on the bills he names. I am sorry to say that these bills all came up on the only day when I was absent, and then it was with the consent of the Speaker. I understood that these bills were going to be brought up by the minority leader with a hope of their passage but merely for political purposes. So that they need not worry either of you any further I will state that had I been present I would have voted with my party in every particular instance.

Just so that Mr. Kraft gets an answer to each paragraph of his statement I will state that I think he is just a little bit wrong in his statements that I voted against the bill limiting women and minors in industry, a 48-hour week. I do not think this question ever came to a direct vote but it was on the question of discharging the committee that had the bill in charge and I voted not to discharge the committee.

Now we come to his statement that I voted against the reduction of twenty-five per cent in the income tax as advocated by Governor Smith. I am just a little bit proud of this vote. Personally I think it is rather a little bit too much to the minority class of today. Men who are contented on to pay campaign contributions, to hand them back one-quarter of the state for millions and millions of dollars for things that could have been taken care of by this year's taxes, if they had all been collected, and not handed back during this, the richest time this state ever knew, and the best time to col-
